Resources from National Center on Intensive Intervention (NCII)

Open Call for Behavioral Interventions and Programs: Due September 16

The National Center on Intensive Intervention has released a call for behavioral intervention programs and behavioral progress monitoring tools. Now through September 16, 2015, the Center's Technical Review Committee is accepting submissions of studies on behavioral intervention programs and behavioral progress monitoring tools that can be used as part of a data-based individualization program for educating student with disabilities who require intensive intervention due to persistent behavioral problems. All interested vendors are invited to submit.

Updated Screening Tools Chart

The Center on Response to Intervention (RTI) at American Institutes for Research released an updated tools chart from the fifth annual review of screening tools by the Center's Technical Review Committee (TRC) in July. The screening tools chart represents ratings from TRC members on the technical rigor of screening tools and provides information about the efficiency of implementation. The Center on RTI publishes this chart to assist educators and families in becoming informed consumers who can select screening tools that best meet their individual needs.
